MONTHLY COMMENT

Markets in October were roiled mainly by geopolitical tensions, but with strong economic performance in the background.

The escalating conflict in the Middle East has had a major impact on energy price volatility, raising investors' fears of renewed inflation, a sign that the difficulties of the past three years will continue. Nevertheless, the published statistics were reassuring, suggesting that these concerns will be addressed in the medium term. The clear trend toward the election of Donald Trump as US President has weighed on the bond market, with long rates soaring in anticipation of the fiscal loosening he would implement if elected.

Non-tech companies have reported excellent results, confirming their successful adaptation in a challenging environment and successful repositioning in the standardization of this environment.

After the US election, markets may experience some short-term volatility while analyzing the impact of the nominee's policies. But the Fed should independently continue its interest-rate normalization program and, barring further escalation of geopolitical conflicts, the market should return to its stable path.
